Tabard Theatre presents:

Tin Pan Alley Rag

Glorious, toe-tapping music introduces you to two of America’s favorite and influential composers—Scott Joplin, grandson of a slave, and Irving Berlin, son of immigrant Russian Jews—in this tuneful journey intertwining their lives and aspirations. Joplin’s grail of artistic success encounters Berlin’s commercial success in this imaginative meeting of the King of Ragtime and the Titan of Tin Pan Alley.
Keeping you marketable – Observations and comments!

Much has been written and spoken about acquiring specific knowledge about one’s area of specialty (that is not redundant!). Yet, the hospitality industry is – as are most fields in the business world – in a constant state of flux. The country’s and the state’s economies are affected by a variety of factors and the well-being of companies and individuals depends on them. Demographics, technology, strategic commodities, dealing with business cycles affected by market factors, and – in this election year – prognostications about decisions that ought to be made, should require us to be alert and remain flexible in order to maintain or increase our marketability.

Here are some observations that ought to attract our attention:

- Technology: Silicon Valley remains one of the key players in this area. Social networking; robotics; development of alternate, sustainable energies; striving for cost-effective allocation of resources domestically and internationally; first class education – all are areas that are fiercely competitive in this new century. Let me be specific: Thomas L. Friedman, the New York Times columnist had a recent column under the headline: “Accelerating technology eating away at more jobs”. Friedman is referring to technology replacing labor with machines or foreign workers. Our experience has been, that jobs such as Concierges, Maître D’s, Tour Guides, waiters and waitresses are becoming victims of technology.

- Strategic commodities: The price of gasoline is about to exceed $4 per gallon. Much is being written on the effect of fossil fuel prices on the cost of doing business and one’s personal cost of living. In the hospitality industry it will certainly affect car rental companies, limousine companies, courtesy vans etc. who have to factor such increases into their cost of acquiring appropriate, cost effective vehicles and into the rates they charge customers. It would also stand to reason that business trips will more frequently be replaced by teleconferencing or simple Skype-assisted face to face communications, as airlines pass increased fuel expenses on to their customers.

Tourism: In addition to changes in business travel, the hospitality industry will also be affected by changes in leisure travel. Exchange rates among international currencies may affect the choice of destination, as will the search for a safe place to enjoy one’s well-deserved vacation. Excellent personal services provided by the hospitality industry will always be a factor as technology may not be an adequate substitute. Having just returned from a personal trip, I was amazed how almost para-military and paranoid the TSA staff at the airport conducted the search of passengers before releasing them to the boarding gates. This is on one hand reassuring – yet on the other hand – a disincentive for foreigners to choose the USA as a vacation destination given the many more lenient and, in some respects, friendlier countries.

Hugo Martin, in a December 2011 issue of the Los Angeles Times had an interesting column headed: “Tourists spending big bucks in U.S.” Yes, it would be wise if we were to pay attention to this influx of tourists. Foreign visitors, according to Martin, spent $127 billion in the first 10 months of 2011 in the United States, compared to $92 billion spent by Americans traveling abroad.

Wouldn’t it be a good idea to acquire some fluency in Spanish, German, and French – whatever languages those visitors speak?

The Effectiveness and Contribution we, in the hospitality industry can and should make, depends – in all instances – on the skills inventory we establish and maintain in our daily interactions with visitors and clients. Increasing technology will never supplant knowledgeable, friendly, efficient concierges, meeting planners, tour guides, restaurant service employees, interpreters and others in the hospitality industry. Social networking – a misnomer in my opinion – as it creates a more anti-social, anti-face-to-face environment – has its distinct advantages. It does diminish individual interpersonal communications skills much to the chagrin of us in the hospitality industry. Similarly, search engines, no matter how up-to-date and comprehensive will not replace a concierge whose reputation depends on his or her personal knowledge (and feedback from his guests) of tourist attractions, restaurants, transportation services and so on.

Maintain and enhance your skills inventory including a thorough knowledge of available technology but remember: Your marketability depends on your interpersonal skills, an asset that your guests will always prefer over a touch screen on a new technical gadget.

Keep up the good work!

Visit New Santa Cruz Wineries
Kiss the Blarney Stone on March 17, 2012

Okay, I admit, there are quite a few wineries in the Santa Cruz Mountains for people to choose from for tasting and wine clubs. How do you pick one?

My insider information recommends that once you visit all wineries using the SCMWA Passport, start looking at the different fun events that happen throughout the year.

Coming up is Irish Cheese & Wine Tasting at Skov Winery on St. Patrick’s Day

I have known Annette Hunt, owner of Skov Winery, for several years. The Hunts have the expert knowledge from running Roudon Smith Winery for several years before this recent venture which they have embarked on with Skov Winery.

Transitioning to her own one year old winery now, I know Annette’s events are well designed, fun, and simply-elaborate to attend. The name Skov (pronounced “skô”) means “forest” in Danish, combining the Danish background of the Hunts with the Santa Cruz Mountains.

Follow me in March to the Irish Cheese & Wine Tasting at Skov Winery! On Saturday, March 17 from 12-4:30pm

They will be showcasing an assortment of spring cheeses from the British Isles will be tasted and paired with Skov wines this year. Yummy! I can’t wait to sample these!

And of course there will be many of their favorite scrumptious local honey, chocolate, baked goods and salmon-jerky makers out to introduce their products to you for sampling. This is great place to try out some of the best products!

Let’s all have a bit of fun and help celebrate the first year anniversary of Skov Winery!

Where: Skov Winery, 2364 Bean Creek Rd, Scotts Valley

Contact: Annette Hunt 831.438.4374 or wines@SkovWinery.com
Ticket Price: $15pp or $10pp for Skov Wine Club members. No advance ticket purchase needed

Bell Labs, which thrived from the 1920s to the 1980s, was the most innovative and productive institution of the twentieth century. Long before America’s brightest scientific minds began migrating west to Silicon Valley, they flocked to this sylvan campus in the New Jersey suburbs built and funded by AT&T. At its peak, Bell Labs employed nearly fifteen thousand people, twelve hundred of whom had PhDs. Thirteen would go on to win Nobel prizes. It was a citadel of science and scholarship as well as a hotbed of creative thinking. It was, in effect, a factory of ideas whose workings have remained largely hidden until now.

New York Times Magazine writer Jon Gertner unveils the unique magic of Bell Labs through the eyes and actions of its scientists. These ingenious, often eccentric men would become revolutionaries, and sometimes legends, whether for inventing radio astronomy in their spare time (and on the company’s dime), riding unicycles through the corridors, or pioneering the principles that propel today’s technology. In these pages, we learn how radar came to be, and lasers, transistors, satellites, mobile phones, and much more.

Ballet San Jose’s PROGRAM TWO includes four Company Premieres (two of which are also Bay Area Premieres), April 13-15 at San Jose Center for the Performing Arts in downtown San Jose. Jessica Lang’s pas de deux, Splendid Isolation III, and Stanton Welch’s Clear will be making their first appearances on the Bay Area stage. Joining them as Ballet San Jose Company Premieres is George Balanchine’s Allegro Brillante and Clark Tippet’s Bruch Violin Concerto No. 1. The short, four-performance run plays Friday and Saturday nights at 8pm with Saturday and Sunday matinees at 1:30pm. Tickets are $30 - $100 with discounts for students, seniors and groups. The Saturday afternoon program is a Discount Matinee priced at $20 - $70.
