Malcolm Bordelon-Market President and Publisher of the Silicon Valley Business Journal

Malcolm Bordelon is no stranger to Silicon Valley, and was the perfect fit to be the new Market President and Publisher of the Silicon Valley Business Journal.

As some of you might recall, Malcolm formally ran all the business operations for the San Jose Sharks hockey team. He has lived in San Jose more than 20 years. He has a record of community involvement, including time on the board of the San Jose Downtown Foundation. He also served as president of the San Jose Downtown Association in 1998 and 1999.

“The SVBJ is a respected business news organization and resource and is truly connected to the community it serves,” Bordelon said. “This is an amazing opportunity to be deeply involved in the most dynamic business climate in the country while working alongside a talented team, and with a quality organization.”

Bordelon is a member of the American Leadership Forum/Silicon Valley Class XVIII. His past community involvement includes serving as the president of the Sharks Foundation, speaking with area youth as part of the Role Model Program, and serving on the marketing committee of the San Jose Convention & Visitors Bureau.

Malcolm is especially honored to be the media partner/Diamond Sponsor of the Silicon Valley Concierge Association. “The hospitality industry is key to driving the success of Silicon Valley, and we at the business journal appreciate the partnership we have created. The Fall Festival of Food and Wine in 2015 was so successful, that we look forward to every event that the concierge association holds.”
Our first surprise came when we boarded our bus for the trip. We expected a regular bus with two seats on each side, you know, the modified school bus or Greyhound experience. We were so wrong! This bus was like a rock-star, totally decked out, completely self-contained, over-the-top experience. You walked into a seating area, lined with couches on either side, followed by a dining area, followed by a full-on living room with giant televisions. Further back you have a full-sized luxury bathroom and finally, a full kitchen. Royal Coach simply does it right and we were very happy with our accommodations! If you ever see this one at silent auction again, jump on the opportunity.

We invited 20 of our friends. They all brought food and various wines and off we went!

Our first stop was Regale winery. This place should not be missed if you enjoy wine and especially enjoy drinking it in a fabulous setting. Based on a Tuscan Villa, the gardens in back are stupendous. Fountains, fire places, intimate seating areas and gorgeous views await you. We started with a tasting and ended up joining the wine club because the wines are fabulous and the environment is absolutely gorgeous. There is an upstairs party room, which we, unfortunately, haven’t seen yet because it has been booked both times we have gone. Our second time to the venue, we brought along a picnic basket and made an afternoon out of it. I can’t say enough good things about this winery. Also note that they are associated with the Spa, Los Gatos and membership here will give you a discount there, although only on certain days.

Next door to Regale is Burrell School winery. Burrell School began in 1854 and became an estate winery in 1973. With wine names like Detention, Dean’s List and Valedictorian, we couldn’t wait to sample. We ended up with a couple bottles of the Valedictorian which was superb. Because our group was so large, and the venues are next door to each other, we simply split into two groups of 10 and crossed back and forth.

Our final destination for the day was Bargetto Winery in Soquel. They too have a lovely deck overlooking a creek. Established in 1933, they specialize in handcrafted wines in the Santa Cruz Mountains. I purchased some of their Chaucer’s fruit wines that they have been producing since 1964. They are also known for their Honey Mead.

All in all, we had a great day with family and friends and I would not hesitate to make the trip again!
