The gingerbread house’s railroad track also delights guests of all ages, who happily gaze upon this favorite feature.

Each year, the Gingerbread House takes center stage and fills the halls with its sweet aroma, but the property’s 23-foot tall Christmas tree in the main lobby is also impressive in its own right.

ABOUT bruce Munro at Montalvo

Montalvo Arts Center is proud to announce an astonishing new exhibition by artist Bruce Munro. Featuring 10 light-based works ranging in scale from immersive to intimate, Bruce Munro at Montalvo: Stories in Light will utilize multi-hued waves, clusters, cascades, flocks, and seas of illumination, transforming Montalvo’s historic Villa and its extensive public areas into a breathtaking spectacle of light. The exhibition will be the first time Munro’s work has been publicly on display on the West Coast, and it will represent the largest number of his works ever on view at a single venue. It is made possible in part through the generous support of The Valley Foundation.

Bruce Munro at Montalvo blends the highly personal with the poignantly universal, aiming to transcend time and space by inspiring moments of awareness, and inviting viewers to contemplate a world larger and more mysterious than their own existence. Works on view are inspired by Munro’s experiences reading C.S. Lewis's Chronicles of Narnia as a child, drawing on imagery that stayed with him over the years. They also reflect on personal recollections and society’s collective memories.

The exhibition will run from Sunday, October 28, 2018 through Sunday, March 17, 2019.

Weekly, it will be open 6:00pm – 9:30pm on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Sundays, plus selected Thursdays, Fridays, Saturdays.

All visitors arriving by car are requested to catch the Montalvo shuttle bus in Parking Lot 1 of West Valley College, located at the intersection of...

ABSOLUTE NETWORKING
NO-NO’S THAT WILL KILL YOUR PROFESSIONAL REPUTATION AND PUT YOUR NAME ON THE “DO NOT INVITE” LIST

Whether the venue is casual or upscale, there are still some unwritten rules that apply at any type of networking event. Some of which are:

• Walking out of the restroom without washing their hands.
• Picking their nose.
• Licking their fingers.
• Wearing gym clothes still wet with sweat.
• Standing so close that their spit landed on my lip.

When you break one of these unwritten rules, you’ve imprinted a negative perception in the minds of others. Sometimes you’ll have the opportunity to redeem yourself with brilliant conversation or genuine listening skills. However, in most cases, an observed public gaffe will deter any potential interaction.

Is a person’s behavior dictated by their purpose for attending the event? Maybe, but can gross, rude, or dishonest behavior ever be justified? It comes down to the person’s mindset about manners, professionalism, and integrity. The same traits that bring about workplace civility.

Wearing an all-too-casual outfit may not get your thrown out, or handing out your business card without making conversation may merely turn people off, but there are behaviors that can prompt the host to ban you from future events or at the very least, ask you to leave, like getting drunk.

Attending many networking events over the years, I’ve seen a lot of disagreeable and distasteful deeds that dissuaded me from approaching an individual.

Here are 7 unpardonable offenses that can kill your professional reputation:

1. Getting Yours. All of the apportioned appetizers have been consumed; you arrive late and demand to be served; you paid your $10.00 and want what’s coming to you. It is not the host’s or venue’s responsibility to save you a plate or provide special services because of your scheduling conflict. Eat later or order and pay for it. Focus on why you’re there.

2. The Dissatisfied. You don’t like the beverages that are provided; you make a stink and go behind the host’s back to speak to the bartender, putting him/her in an awkward position. Complaining about the complimentary refreshment selection makes you come across as problematic, having poor judgement, and ungrateful—three very unattractive traits.

3. The Class Clown. You remove the venue’s decorations using them to entertain yourself or even take home with you. As a guest in someone’s home, would you rearrange their book shelf or take the flowers from the table? Removing décor or rearranging things is brazen. What would it be like to do business with you?

4. The Shoplifter. You love the stylish martini glass or cute little salt and pepper shakers; you slyly slip it into your bag, thinking, “They’ll never miss it.” There is no other way to say it, “That is outright stealing!” And, there is no justification for it. If you like something you see, ask the manager where they bought it.

5. The Sneak. Bringing a guest without paying or notifying the host is awkward. Worse yet, a minor chid where alcohol is flowing.

The host and venue make plans according to the number of guests, sneaking in an unaccounted and uninvited guest is deceitful and can cause embarrassment for everyone involved. Bringing a minor child to an adult environment may not only be poor judgement, but illegal. babysitter problems? Stay home.

6. The Swindler. Lying about your name, payment made, or falsifying raffle and drink tickets.

Is one stolen drink or a free raffle ticket worth earning the reputation of being a cheater? Word travels fast in some business communities, even faster on social media. This one lousy “free drink” could cost losing your job and/or clients and business relationships.

7. The Freeloader. Bringing personal containers with the intention of loading up to take home.

First, unless you’re living in poverty, taking food home in personal containers from an event is not only ill-mannered, but also unsanitary. Second, enough food and drink is planned for a certain number of guests, taking more than your share takes away from the other guests. Furthermore, it is considered stealing! Another unfavorable trait in the business world.

Whether you paid to attend a networking function or it is free, people are observing you—how you interact with others, how you eat, how much you drink, and how you conduct yourself.

You’re not just losing a potential business connection, but more importantly, your reputation. Something that should be guarded and constantly developed.

“The reputation of a thousand years may be determined by the conduct of one hour.” —Japanese Proverb

New AHLEF, HCareers Report Promises Robust Workforce for Hotels

WASHINGTON, D.C. – A new report shows that over 50 percent of the Gen Z demographic—the largest generation in the U.S.—is interested in pursuing a career in hospitality. Commissioned by the American Hotel & Lodging Educational Foundation (AHLEF) and conducted by BW Research Partnership in collaboration with HCareers, the study examines the perceptions, attitudes and career preferences of Gen Z as they gear up to enter the workforce. The study also showed that Gen Z values companies that take care of their employees, the hallmark of an industry that takes care of their people.

“We are very heartened to see the high level of interest from the Gen Z market. The $590 billion hospitality industry is continuously developing new programs to attract and retain talent,” said Rosanna Maietta, AHLEF President. “We want to embrace this next wave of potential employees, and are committed to understanding their priorities so we can create career pathways that build a viable and fruitful environment for everyone in the future.”

“This research further validates our drive as a career platform to foster relationships with students and future employers seeking a job in the hospitality industry,” said Ron Mitchell, CEO of Virgil Holdings which owns and operates HCareers. “We’re excited to continue our partnership with AHLEF and highlight the extensive growth opportunities for Gen Z in our industry.”

Coinciding with National Apprenticeship Week, the findings support the hospitality industry’s job training and apprenticeship programs that facilitate employees to move up the ladder of opportunity. Research shows that Gen Z has an average attention span of 8 seconds, compared to 12 seconds of millennials. “We better catch them fast,” added Maietta.

Key findings from the research include:

Gen Z is big and wants to work.
Gen Z is the largest generation in the U.S. with over 61 million individuals born between 1995-2010. The most racially diverse age group, 20 percent of Gen Z is bilingual. Many witnessed their parents struggle through the recession and consequently have lower risk tolerance and concerns about the economy. 45 percent are already working full or part-time.

Women and men want different things.
The survey found stark differences between male and female Gen Z respondents. Already a highly socially inclusive generation, when choosing an employer, Gen Z women are twice as likely as men to list a socially responsible company as the most important factor when choosing their job. The top traits found to be important to a Gen Z’s success at work include good attitude, confidence and team work for females, compared to technical skills for males.

Hospitality is important.
The Hotel and Lodging industry attracts higher interest from Gen Z and young millennials than industries such as construction, finance, insurance, restaurant and food services. It’s also the one thing men and women can agree on – the industry attracts interest from both males (52%) and females (53%), bonus for recruiters in the field.

Companies must be held accountable.
When choosing a company to work for, Gen Z prioritizes companies with a positive reputation for treating their employees fairly, paying them well, being socially responsible, and providing opportunities to gain new skills.

Education is not seen as important.
The survey revealed a majority of Gen Z (52.5%) respondents do not believe education is a top characteristic necessary to qualify for a job. Attitude, confidence, ability to work in a team, and technical or job-specific skills are more important, according to Gen Z respondents.

Gen Z is most interested in management.
Gen Z is very interested in positions that include “manager” in the title, perhaps reflecting a desire for higher pay and career growth. However, Gen Z also shows a heightened interest in customer-service jobs that include face-to-face interactions such as front desk agents and bartenders.

METHODOLOGY
The study was conducted online through a BW Research survey to a national panel of 15 to 30-year-old individuals via email and mobile phone. Designed to be representative of the U.S. general population, quotas were developed using population estimates provided by the U.S. Census Bureau. Representation was maintained for age, gender, ethnicity and race. The survey was completed by 2,846 respondents with an average completion length of just over 16 minutes. In this study, Gen Z is defined as individuals between the ages of 15 and 23, and young millennials are defined between the ages of 24 and 30.

The study, commissioned by AHLEF was administered in an effort to understand the perceptions of Generation Z towards careers in hospitality and ultimately how the hospitality industry can better position itself to attract and retain Generation Z talent. For more information on the research visit ahlef.org/summaries.

About the American Hotel & Lodging Educational Foundation
AHLEF is the hospitality industry’s philanthropic organization, dedicated to helping people build careers that improve their lives and strengthen the lodging industry. Created in 1953, AHLEF initially focused on providing scholarships to a small group of promising hospitality students. Since that time, the Foundation has taken on a much greater mandate: ensuring a strong and viable future for the entire lodging industry. Underscoring the industry’s stories of opportunity, growth, and success, AHLEF priorities include scholarships, research and career development programs.
